

HUNT IN RIVER FOR THE BODY OF MISSING ENSIGN

Though Superiors Doubt
Young's Suicide Note,
Search Is Kept Up.

WISHED IN NIGHT.
Was to Have Faced Court
Marital Yesterday and Had Talked of Suicide.

Although the officers of the Brooklyn Navy Yard and the police are still working to-day on the mystery of the disappearance of Ensign Robert Simon Young Jr. from the torpedo boat destroyer Perkins, anchored off the yard, neither Admiral Leutze, in command of the yard, nor Lieut-Commander Fringie, of the Perkins, believe the missing officer drowned himself, as he threatened in a note left behind. The harbor squad and details of blue jackets are dragging the river for his body, nevertheless.

Young was confined to quarters and on his honor not to leave the ship pending court martial set for yesterday for oversteering his leave of absence by five days on his last trip ashore.

Many of the officers refer to the suicide only ten days ago of Lieut. Thomas L. Osborn of the navy, who shot himself under exactly similar circumstances in the yard, and think Young followed his example.

Young was a great favorite with the crew and other officers. When he got into the trouble which led to the order for a court martial several tried to cheer him with an assurance that he would get off with a light punishment. Perhaps he had in mind the fact that down in Norfolk, Va., a young woman whom the Ensign had been visiting and was to have wed this fall would be considered a mitigating circumstance by the officers of the court. She is Miss Mary Merritt.

HEAT MAY HAVE AFFECTED MIND OF ENSIGN.

The last seen of Young was at 10 o'clock Tuesday night. Some of the officers went to his quarters to say a few cheering words, but they found him very blue.

"Osborn found the way out. I guess it's my turn," he said gloomily. It was fearfully hot on the Perkins, her steel structure making the mercury, which was at 84 aboard, leap to 100 on the boat. The officers noted that it was probably even hotter in the Young quarters than elsewhere. It is suggested that this heat affected Young's mind, leading to his nervous condition.

The next morning the officer of the day ordered a marine to lead Young to report to him. He was missing.

The note was found on the table, and one line of it read:

"I intend to commit suicide by drowning." The rest of it Admiral Leutze declines to reveal.

The Ensign's revolver was found in his room fully loaded, but with one of the cartridges nicked where the trigger had snapped but had not exploded it. Some of the officers believe he first tried to shoot himself, and failing decided to go overboard.

Others insist he has simply cleared out and probably gone up to his father, Dr. R. S. Young. They say, too, that he will probably have a good talk with his parents and, advised by them, return and "make his medicine."

POPULAR WITH OTHER OFFICERS ABOARD PERKINS.

Young entered Annapolis in 1904 and was made an ensign in 1910. Since his graduation from Annapolis in June, 1910, he has been attached to the Perkins. He was popular with other naval officers. They regarded him as a happy-go-lucky sort of chap, a good friend and an agreeable companion. His home was in North Carolina.

When Lieut-Commander Fringie went ashore yesterday afternoon he left Lieut. Grady, chief engineer, in command of the Perkins, and told him not to talk about Young.

The ensign was transferred last winter from the cruiser North Carolina to the Perkins, and presently became chief engineer of the torpedo boat destroyer. He liked the job and the crew liked him, but before long Lieut. Grady was transferred to the Perkins from the Dade and was made chief engineer of

Lieut-Commander Fringie. Fringie and the ensign didn't get along well thereafter, it was said, but it was further said that the ensign was "one of those chaps that don't talk much."

Was to Have Married Norfolk Girl This Fall.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 12.—Ensign Robert S. Young Jr., mysteriously missing from the torpedo boat destroyer Perkins at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, was to have married this fall Miss Beattie Haldane Merritt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bryant Merritt, of Norfolk. The engagement was announced in May. Ensign Young is the son of Dr. Robert S. Young, of Concord, N. C. Recent letters from him said he was in the best of health and spirits. His mother is in an Atlanta hospital, where she recently underwent an operation.

DOG GUARDS DEAD WOMAN.

Snaps at Men Who Come to Take Body of His Mistress.

Guarded by a pet fox terrier, the body of Mrs. Sarah George was found last night in her apartments on the top floor of the four-story flat No. 23 St. Paul avenue, Jersey City. The woman was last seen alive Sunday. She was in a kneeling attitude at a couch and the dog was by her side. Death had been due to apoplexy.

Mrs. George was twenty-eight years old and lived alone, the fox terrier being her only companion. The dog snarled and snapped at two men and a woman attracted to the George apartments and it had to be driven from the room before the body could be removed to the morgue.

TAKES A BRIDE SECRETLY.

Gustavus Sidenberg, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, is receiving congratulations to-day upon his marriage to Mrs. Theresa Gumbinner yesterday.

Mr. Sidenberg and his bride came up from Long Branch, where both have been for some weeks, and were married by the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman. The bride has a fine home at No. 6 West Fifty-sixth street. The honeymoon will be spent on board his yacht.

The first his friends knew of the marriage was when they read the formal announcement in the newspapers.

Veteran Whaler Dead.

Daniel C. Macy, of Setauket, L. I., ninety-five years old, a veteran whaler and a friend of Mayor Gaynor, died today. In the years when Bedford was the whaling center on Long Island Sound Macy was active. He sailed in whaling vessels all over the world and made a fortune. In recent years he has been conducting a farm and was often visited by Mayor Gaynor, who loved to talk with the old man and listen to the latter's well-phrased reminiscences.
